PRINCETON, N.J. - The Princeton Symphony Orchestra's annual Holiday Pops program is going virtual. Those looking to hear some holiday cheer will have 10 chances to experience it this year.

Multiple free weekend webcasts of the orchestra's seasonal musical showcase will be offered with performances by local high school students, ballet dancers and pianists Christina and Michelle Naughton.

Since its founding in 1980, the Princeton Symphony Orchestra has evolved into a professional orchestra which serves as the region's hub for classical music knowledge and a gateway to the exploration of new music and performance practices. They also offer pops, and chamber music concerts, as well as lecture events, children's programs, and innovative collaborative programming.

Additionally, like previous years, members of the Princeton High School Choir will lead the annual carol singalong. Access to the program will be available via the orchestra's website starting at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5.
